PROGRAM

How much would it cost your firm per day (or even per hour) if you couldn't access your servers, computers, and critical data?

Let's do the math together.

According to a 2003 study at Pepperdine University, data loss costs U.S. businesses more than $18 billion a year. If you have one office or twenty, your technology is vital to keeping your business running smoothly. This interactive seminar will focus on the critical nature of having a plan for a sound technology environment with appropriate solutions in place. Debi Bush of CMIT Solutions, along with an internal IT manager from the host engineering firm, will discuss maintaining technological systems, how a firm can prevent any data loss, and ensuring business continuity. There will be time for questions so that attendees may address issues particular to their firms.

SPEAKERS

Debi Bush, Chief Marketing Officer for CMIT Solutions
Internal IT Manager from host engineering firm
